Grey House Publishing Canada announces the 166th Edition of Canadian Almanac & Directory

Grey House Publishing is proud to announce the publication of the 2013 Edition of the Canadian Almanac & Directory. With almost 100,000 names and address of contacts throughout the network of Canadian institutions and 50,000 entries covering hundreds of topics, this is the foremost reference for Canadian information on all things Canadian.

Published annually since 1847, the Almanac continues to be widely used by libraries, schools, universities, business professionals, government offices, information specialists, researchers, and anyone needing current, accessible information on every imaginable topic relevant to those who live and work in Canada.

This latest edition provides the most comprehensive picture of Canada, from physical attributes to economic and business summaries to leisure and recreation. This year's edition includes the 2012 Provincial election results as well as over 14,000 updates, more listings and more detailed profiles. All charts and tables have been revised with the latest statistics from the 2011 Canadian Census, including population, immigration, income and other vital growth figures. Furthermore, this latest publication offers new constellation images in full colour and contains a wide variety of textual materials, charts, color photographs and detailed directory listings.

The first section, the Almanac, is comprised of 10 major categories including history, geography, science, awards & regulations, economics, vital statistics and more. Over the years, we have also added several current articles, color maps and photographs, charts and tables; providing a fact-filled snapshot of Canada that will be a valuable resource for all residents, politicians, as well as anyone in the business community. Its table of contents details all categories for easy access.

Section two covers Arts & Culture, with listings arranged into nine categories which include everything from Art Galleries to Zoos.

Section three, Associations, offers complete coverage of Canada's hundreds of associations. Arranged into 113 topics covering everything from accounting to youth, each listing includes the most up-to-date contact information.

The fourth section, Broadcasting, begins with Canada's major broadcasting companies then covers radio and television stations, as well as cable companies and specialty broadcasters arranged by province.

Section five highlights Business & Finance, with data on accounting, banking, insurance and Canada's major companies and stock exchanges. It includes a separate section for major accounting firms, with descriptions of the featured company's listings.

The sixth section, Education, is arranged by province for easy navigation. Listings include government agencies, districts, specialized and independent schools and university and technical facilities. This section also includes an index to selected facilities/schools. For added depth of data, listings also include grade levels taught, key officers or administrators and remote campus locations.

The seventh section, Federal and Provincial Government, begins with a quick reference. This handy chart allows for easy navigation through these government agencies. Completely updated with the latest information, users will also find information on the Royal Family and foreign diplomatic representation.

The eighth and ninth sections expand on the Canadian Almanac & Directory's governmental coverage with additional data on the Municipal Government and the Judicial Government. These two sections detail all county and municipal districts whilst segregating major municipalities. Entries in this edition have been expanded to include date of incorporation, square miles and population figures. The Judicial Government section provides thorough coverage of courts in Canada – federal as well as provincial. These listings are categorized by type of court and by city within each province; they also include all current judges. Another beneficial feature of the current edition is the district maps for all provinces.

Section ten covers Hospitals and Health Care Facilities, which provides users with the most current data on government agencies, hospitals, community health centers, retirement care facilities and mental health facilities. For easy navigation, the listings are arranged by province and city.

Section eleven provides vital details for Law Firms. This part of the Almanac has been significantly improved with new data on major law firms; there are also descriptions of the firm as well as data on all senior partners.

The twelfth section begins with Canada's main Library/Archives and continues its focus on Government Departments for Libraries. The Provincial listings display regional systems first, followed by public libraries and then archives.

The thirteenth section, Publishing, features publishers, books, magazines and newspapers categorized by province. Magazine listings are arranged in six major categories, preceded by a magazine name index for easy searching. Updated data, including frequency and circulation figures, add value to each listing.
